The late Mr Price, who hanged himself in Tothillfields Bridewell on Tuefday last, is faid to have executed every department in the forgeries on the Bank: He made the paper, engraved the plate, made the ink, and worked the notes off at prefs. He forged the hand writing so well, that even the persons whose names were forged could not swear to the fact. His feerely was altonishing; his wife not even knowing, in the most remote manner, the transactions he so long employed himself in.

There was found, in a box belonging to Price, who has so frequently forged on the Bank, two artificial notes, very curiously executed in imitation of nature. Thefe, it is obvious, he occasionally wore, as a part of the various modes of his difguife; and by which difguife he had most astonishingly, such a length of time, eluded juffice !

Extract of a letter from London, Jan. 31. HOUSE OF COMMONS.

* As foon as the Speaker had taken the chair and read a variety of motions for papers on various fubjects to be laid before the House, and on which his Majesty is to be addressed,

"Mr Gilbert brought up the report, That a supply be granted to his Majesty; after which it was resolved, that the House should to morrow form is felf into a Committee to confider thereof.

rally laid on the table. Mr Pitt having just entered the House, the honourable Mr Marsham moved for leave to bring in a bill for reducing the fundry laws, respecting the militia, into one general law, for the future regulation of it in that part of Great Britain called Eng-

"Mr Marsham entered into a kind of history of the militia, for which he held the highest respect Legislature. He recalled to the recollection of the House, that the Hanoverians having been called to our affiltance in the year 1757, the fpirit of the natian had been routed to rathe and embody the mini-tia, as it was conceived to imply a figma upon it, that it could not defend itself against any power that should attempt to invade it. In such estimation was the militia held, that, at the end of the war before the last, the officers of the militia received the thanks of the House of Commons, and it had given them the most heart-felt satisfaction. At the end, however, of the last war, for what reason the Hon mem-ber knew not, the House of Commons had not thought proper to vote any approbation of their conduct; and he verily believed, that the want of applaufe that had been before given, had, in a great measure, caused the neglect of the militia. The Hon, member added, that to restore it to its former state of reputation, there had been a general meeting of the officers, and the first step resolved upon had been, that leave should be moved for reducing all the laws, twenty-three in number, into one general law, for its farther regulation.

"The Hon. Gentleman paid many compliments to the militia, and reprefented it as the great fecuri. ty of the kingdom; for that flould another wa break out, we should never be able to beat the uni ted fleets of France, Spain, and Holland; and tho his Majesty had affurances of peace, it was very difficult to say how long these affurances could be depended upon. He then went into a strain of high panegyric on the Minister, and gave him every crethe best intentions towards the militia.

"The Hon. Gentleman then mentioned the lines of the plan of reform that was meant to be in-troduced. It was intended, he faid, in future, that troduced. It was intended, he faid, in future, that they should be calisted to serve for five years instead of three, and to be embodied every year; and that no man having more than one child should be obliged to ferve.

to ferre. "The three great objections, he faid, against militia, were, that it was very expensive; that it hurt the recruiting fervice; and that it was a burden to the people. The Hos. Gentleman combated these objections; and, after a few words on the utilities. tiry and respectability of the militia, read his mo-tion to the Houle; which being seconded,
"Mr Pitt rose, more for the purpose, he said, of declaring the high veneration in which he held the declaring the high veneration in which he heid the militia, than to enter into any of those particulars the Hon. Gentleman had gone into ; and; after a vowing himself the firm friend of that body, which he really was, he would not pledge himself to any specific reform. He thought the militia laws required regulation; but he would not at prefent fay what mode would be the most likely to answer the for the many compliments he had been pleafed to pay him; but though he thought the militia a very useful body, he would not fay that he did not with that the calling them out every year might be avoid-ed. He thought it unnecessary; and that the embodying them once every three years, might be found fusicient to keep them in proper exercise and disci-

on Mr Marsham begged a few words in reply, and said, that the great object with him, and those that went with him, in reforming the militia, was, the embodying them every year. dying them every year ; and, without that, he could not, for one, hope for any good; and, therefore, if he thought the talling them out every year would be objected to, he would not trouble the House any farther on the subject.

"Mr Pitt remaining filest, the question was put, and leave obtained for bringing in the bill; and the House adjourned, at half past four o'clock, till to-

"The visit I mentioned in my last, paid by Lord N-th to Mr P-tt, now turns out not to have been with a view of bringing about a coalition between them, his L — p being as firmly refolved to fupport Mr F-x as ever, which will be fufficiently verified in the first public question that comes to be agitated in the House of Commons. It is said to have been at the earnest request of his L.have been at the earnest request of his L p, that. Mr Charles Dundas applied for a Chillern Huna dred, in order to make room for his old and steady friend Sir Grey Cooper. Some people may be for-prifed that Ministry should so readily grant this request, when they knew the purpose meant to be ferved by it, and when a very contrary conduct was observed on former occasions. There are now however so many ways found out of vacating feats, fach as procuring army agencies, &c. that it would answer no pur-pose for a minister to refuse the Chilterns; and there-fore they are now easily obtained; even by the most violent in the opposition."

A melancholy accident happened in Leith Roads on board his Majesty's ship Racchorse, during the late blowing weather. A young gentleman, a mid-fhipman, (named Crawford) in attempting to pass the gangway, after nine o'clock, his foot flipped, and he fell overboard; and although every immediate exertion was used by the boats of the squa dron, the darkness of the night, friength of the tide, and confused sea, rendered all their efforts to save him ineffectual. By the Eagle, Captain Blain, and the Boyd, Captain Boyd, lately arrived in Clyde from America, we have received the following intelligence:

Bofton, Dec. 1. Late last Friday evening, after a debate, the honourable the Senate negativea the bill fent up from the Lower House, repealing all laws respecting the resugees of every description. New York, Dec. 8. We can affure the public, rom the best authority, that the Indians on the west lide of the Ohio river are determined to support their right to the lands claimed by the United States, untels they are regularly purchased. They have lately held a great council, and came to a refolu-tion to bury in oblivion all their former animolities, and fland in readiness to repel the unjust encroachments of the white people, who now begin to give general diffatisfaction. They deny the right of the British to cede their lands, and are greatly surprised that the United States of America, so remarkable for wildom, should even entertain the most distant idea of founding a claim to their lands on the late treaty. They would not permit the geographer-geand the affiftant furveyors of the States to enter upon the execution of their business, which occasioned their return.

Fall 10.— That the quantity of corn-fpirit fent from Scotland into England during these last some or five years, was greater than the whole quantity of such spirits which had been charged with, and paid dusy in Scotland, there having been slittled, and charged with duty in Scotland, between the 5th of July 1782, and the 1st of November 1784, two thousand three hundred and forty-from tone of corn-spirits, and in the same period two thousand nine corn-spirits, and in the same period two thousand nine hundred and sourteen tons of corn-spirits were sent from

This is a folid fact-it feels like adamant. The Truth.— Whis is a folid fact—it feels like adament. The Diffillers have bitherto allowed the gentlemen to triumph, and to advance what feemed good to them upon the fubject.—It is now time to join iffue, and to explain to their country the nature of an accufation, which, originating with their interested rivals of London, is endeavoured to be confirmed by their good friends in Scotland. In the two years mentioned, the duty upon spirits was prefamptive not real; i. e. although twenty gallons of spirits and up-wards, were actually drawn from one hundred gallons of wath, yet duty was only paid for fifteen, both in England and Scotland; confecquently, though a great deal more and Scotland; confequently, though a great deal more spirits were produced than had been paid for by the gauge of the walk, yet no more than Africa appeared upon the most of Excise. But when the Scots exported spirits when the Scots expo books of Excise. But when the Scots exported spirits to England, another charge was made upon ears gallon of the pirits. Isinped, to make them equal to the duties then in England, and it was only upon payment of that equalizing duty that parmits were granted for the transportation. Now, it is plain, that as the first duty was paid upon the perfamptive quantity of filters, and the second duty upon the real quantity, it behaved the quantity permitted to exceed the other.—It is submitted then to the Public, if the state that of the Excise be fair or candid. Had England at that time sens two thousand tons of spirits to Scotland, int time fent two thousand tons of spirits to f outand would appear upon the permit ac the full two thousand would appear upon the permit ac-count; and the prefumptive quantity only upon the books of Encife. The charge against England might have been that the fent more spirits to Scotland than the paid for. It is true, the Scotlish Board had such a prodigious respect for the letter of the law, that they preferred it to philed treath. The law had faid, thist fifteen gallons could only a got from one hundred of wall; and not a drop more was they allow to be taken from it. Fifteen was the work at the aft of Parliament; but aftist experiment fail two and upwards. The Board of Exeric folemply decided at word of the literal wildom of the nation, which was the made to aft against the improvement of manufactures, as the constitution of the state of the literal wildom of the nation, which was the made to aft against the improvement of manufactures, as made to act against the improvement of manufacturate hereingenoity of workmen. Southand was doomed to a fourth of her grain.—Were Lord Peter's Lord to be with a "Be it enacted, by the authority aforefaild" Excife would make it go down the throats of the peofor the best mutton or venion in the kingdom. English Board saw with pleasure a capital infromenian made in the art of fermentation; and so soon as the factories of the company of the soon as the same to be established, they, with good ferste and made policy, charged the duties of law upon the mass and that left the distiller to draw from it the utmost value which his degree of knowledge in the business enabled him.

The practice, therefore, of South and North Brisis being so opposite in principle, and upequal in effect, the scotch distillers feel no computation in declaring. The they did every thing in their power to descat the anistentiagon of the Excise in Scotland, and to obtain the improduce from their grain drawn by the manufactures in England. But, if the quantities distilled in Scotland, for which its duties were paid, together with the produce of the Particoln manufacture, and the difference between the real and the presumptive allowance, or charge of the Escife, by an together, the consumpt of Scotland during the three years in question, will considerably exceed right bundled issued gallons, over and besides the quantity exported to England. To this is again to be added, the great amount of the uniferenced (tills, working in vast numbers both in toward country.

The Lands and Barony of BAN-NOCKBURN, with the Coal, and Mills, and the Harbour, NOCKBURN, with the Coal, and Mills, and the Harbour, and Coalfolds at Fallinpow, lying in the parish of St Ninians, and thire of Stirling, within three miles of the town of Stirling, upon the great roads leading from Stirling to Edinburgh, and to Glafgow.

These lands consist, conform to a plan, of 796 Scots acres of property, and 264 acres sewed out to different persons; all holding of the Crown, are rated in the land-tax books at 12191. 11 s. 8 d. Scots; and the purchaser will have right to

The nett rent of the land estate (exclusive of the coal) for crop 1783, was 7621. 7 s. Sterling, including therein the price of 2c bolls malt, and 54 bolls out meal, at 16 s. per boll.

There is a large Manfion-house with suitable offices. Alio a large garden and orchard, and a pigeon-house on the premisses, and a salmon fishing at Fallinpow, none of which are included in the refut-roll. There is also a great number of fine full grown timber trees, consisting of oak, ash, beach, and clim, &c. of considerable value; with several young plan-and clm, &c. of confiderable value; with feveral young plan-tations of various kinds of wood, very thriving.

The lands are generally inclosed and subdivided, partly with some dykes, and partly with thriving hedges.—From their fituation in a populous country, where extensive manu-factures are carried on, and where coal, and all the articles of living are cheap; and from their viccinty to lime, and good roads, they are capable of great improvements, and increase of sent. Some farms are now open, which will rise; and when the other leades which are current expire, a few years hence, a considerable advance may be depended on over the whole eftate; and great advantage may be derived from feu-ing, and from erecting mills on the water of Bannockburn. There is a valuable field of marle upon the eftate, to which a level is carried up. Also two yearly fairs, and a weekly market.

The coal of Bannockburn is extensive, consisting of different feams, level free, and is well known to be of the best quality, and of great value. It has for years past yielded a nett profit, after defraying on-coad and all expences, of abou 15001, per annum, as will appear from the coal books, and it may be wrought to a much greater extent if the proprietor in-clines: For, befides the demand from the town of Stirling and the country around, there is a harbour and fold and other con-veniencies at Fallinpow, on the Frith of Forth, belonging to the eftate, where a fea fale may be carried on to a great advantage.

A purchase in itself more complete, of better and more comyenient fituation for intercourfe with Edinburgh, Glafgow, Stirling, and the Frith of Forth, &c. and capable of high-er improvement, rarely occurs in the market. For the encouragement of bidders this citate will be expo-fed at 300001. The tacks, rent-roll, plan, progress of writs, and condi-tions of sale, are to be seen in the hands of John Moir writons of tale, are to be teen in the lands of plan Moir wri-ter to the fignet; and for further particulars application may be made to him, or to John Dundas writer to the fignet, or John M'Killop writer in Stirling, or to Alexander Farquhar-fon accomptant in Edinburgh, who has power to fell by private bargain. William Thomson overseer of the coal at Bannockburn will show the estate, and the coal books. Soft Sopery to be Sold.

THE Company under the firm of the LEITH SOPERY, having now given up the manufactoring of Soft Sope, the whole Utenfils used in faid branch, with the Houses and Areas, lying in the Tolbooth Wynd, South Leith, are to be exposed to public roup at Gibb's Cosechouse on the Shore of Leith, on Monday the 13th current, betwist the hours of twelve noon and two afterunoon.

The articles of roup and title-deeds are to be feen in the hards of Robert Jamicson writer to the figuet, Edinburgh, with whom, or David Neilson, at the Company's Office, Leith, any person willing to make a private bargain, may commune. A ground plan of the subjects to be seen at the Company's Office.

N. B. The Company continues to carry on the manufac-turing of TALLOW CANDLES, as formerly, under the firm of the LEITH SOPERY COMPANY. Orders addreffed, as usual, will be dnly attended to.
